Stimulating and sustaining national growth and development through gender empowerment

Introduction

Issues on gender equality and women empowerment are important globally. The overall objective is to reduce poverty among women and therefore poverty generally. Gender equality will enhance women's access to and control over productive resources, increase participation in decision making and governance. This can result in the transformation of rural communities as women represent in most cases the pillar of many families and communities. There are obvious imbalances in the distribution of resources to gender all over the world. Training is therefore important to expose the reason(s) for this imbalance and to proffer practical solutions which could result in harnessing and mobilising women resources for increased productivity.

Objectives

- To identify strategies that will allow greater involvement of women in mainstream and therefore empower them.
- To explore opportunities for partnerships and collaboration in Policy designs and development, and implementation.
